PHASE ONE:

The first phase of the nomination process will involve the submission of information and documents describing the organization and preservation project being nominated via online form, available at texashistoricalfoundation.org/duda-award.html.

Phase One review will check to see that all sections of the form have been completed as applicable, verify that the organization being nominated has 501(c)(3) status or is an eligible state organization, and review other information submitted. Phase One Nominations will be reviewed by the Texas Historical Foundation between August 1 and October 1, 2023. The reviewer will score the nominations based on the information submitted describing the organization and their historic preservation project, using a point system denoted in the Phase One Nomination Form.

The highest scoring projects will be asked to submit a Phase Two Nomination Form. If more than one applicant's scores are identical for Phase One Nominations, the tie will be broken by THF.

All applicants who submit nominations in Phase One will be notified of the outcome and thanked for their submissions by October 1, 2023. At that time, applicants selected for Phase Two will be invited to submit the Phase Two Form. No application fee will be required for Phase Two.

PHASE TWO:

The second phase of the selection process will concentrate on the Organization's proposal for the use of the award money.

The funds must be used to continue the historic preservation project described in Phase One, including planning costs, architectural and engineering fees, construction expenses and normal project management expenses. Funds should not be used to pay for normal administrative expenses. Completed Phase Two Applications will be submitted via email to grants@texashistoricalfoundation.org.

The selection of winners will be made by the Duda Awards Jury, a group of respected and experienced historic preservation experts. Members of the jury and selection of the winners will be kept confidential until awards are presented at the presentation event. The highest scoring project from the Phase Two Applications will receive the Michael C. Duda Award and $100,000 in funding to be applied to the nominated project. Honor Awards and an accompanying $20,000 and $30,000 prizes will be given to the second and third highest scoring applicants respectively. If applicants scores are identical for any phase, the tie will be broken by a vote of the Duda Awards Jury.

No match of funds is required to receive the award, however the organization must have initiated the project, and the proposed budget for the preservation project must match or exceed $100,000.00.
