Marshall J. Doke, Jr., a now-retired attorney from Dallas, has made a difference in the fight to save the Lone Star past. He closed by saying that he was honored to receive this special recognition and prouder still that his efforts might have made a difference in the fight to save the Lone Star past.

During the ceremony, Doke reminded attendees that Texas is different from every other state and has a history that deserves to be saved. He closed by saying that he was honored to receive this special recognition and prouder still that his efforts might have made a difference in the fight to save the Lone Star past.

At the luncheon, Catherine McKnight, vice chair of the THC, made the presentation to Doke. What Doke, who has roots in Eastern Europe and was brought to this state by his parents, revered more than anything was the simple beauty that he saw in the state's past. The 63-year-old attorney described to the crowd how he planned and in articles he wrote, all while researching and writing, how he joined the Texas Historical Foundation board members.

He shared a love of all things Texas. Their lives intersected when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas Historical Foundation board members. Their friendship was cemented when both served as Texas His-