Veterans Assist in Search for Battle of Medina Site

The Battle of Medina (also known as the Medina Massacre) took place near San Antonio, Texas, on May 10, 1813, during the War of 1812. The battle was a significant event in the early history of Texas, and it is remembered as an important milestone in the fight for Texas' independence.

In the late 20th century, the site of the battle was marked with a monument, but historians have long been searching for the precise location of the conflict. In recent years, the search has gained new momentum, with the help of veteran volunteers and modern technology.

Technological Updates Coming to THF

The Texas Historical Foundation (THF) is embarking on a series of technological updates to its website, aimed at improving the user experience and making important resources more accessible. These changes will include updates to the resource database, integration of the Neon customer resource database, and improvements to visitor experience and design compatibility with mobile devices.

Becoming a member of the Texas Historical Foundation provides you with a subscription to Texas HERITAGE magazine, access to our online resource database, and other benefits. Visit our website to learn more about how you can support Texas history.

North Central TX Regional Preservation Summit 2023

Preservation Texas will be hosting the North Central Texas Regional Preservation Summit on May 11th at the recently renovated Crazy Water Hotel. The Summit aims to educate and empower local preservationists, and attendees will hear from experts, advocates, and local preservationists about the importance of preserving our cultural heritage.

The Summit is the largest and most comprehensive gathering of preservationists in the state of Texas. It is an opportunity for preservationists to share their knowledge and resources and to learn from other experts in the field.

The Summit will feature informative sessions with topics including Mineral Wells history, the Bankhead Highway, and the Bankhead Highway. For more information on the summit or to register, go to our website. Tickets are $40 for Preservation Texas members, $50 for non-members, or $60 for first-time members, which includes a complimentary one-year admission to the Summit — Preservation Texas.

Stay tuned! More information will be available on the website over the next few weeks.
